Transition Newsletter 3

Wishing you a happy half term from your Achievement Leaders

We are pleased to introduce the Achievement Leaders who will be supporting students on the Borington site: Gemma Williams (Year 7) and Stacey Hannon (Year 8).

Achievement Leaders are non-teaching staff dedicated to the pastoral wellbeing of our students. As your child begins their secondary school journey, we understand that this transition can bring both excitement and uncertainty. Gemma and Stacey will play a key role in ensuring that students feel supported, confident and ready to succeed.

Gemma Williams, who has served as an Achievement Leader at King Charles I School for over two years, is highly skilled in helping students establish a strong foundation in Year 7. She is committed to building positive relationships, promoting high expectations and celebrating student success. Gemma is also well known within the local community and is passionate about supporting young people beyond the school environment.

Stacey Hannon joined us this academic year and brings extensive experience from her work in other local secondary schools. She has already made a strong impression, helping our current Year 7 cohort settle quickly and flourish.

We appreciate that the transition to secondary school can be challenging for families as well as students. If you have any concerns or would like support, we encourage you to get in touch.

Getting to know your child

We have now visited several of our primary schools and are well on the way, gathering key information about your child to support their transition. It has been really useful as we want to know your child as well as our primary colleagues do. I am proud to say this is effective due to the strong relationship between us and our feeder schools. For non-feeder and out of area schools, we arrange separate follow up conversations, to ensure everyone has the same opportunity to share important information about your
